

Biosketch Prof. Risto Lehtonen

Dr. Risto Lehtonen is Professor Emeritus of Statistics at the University of Helsinki, Finland.

Formerly he was Professor of Statistics at the University of Helsinki, Professor of Statistics at the University of Jyväskylä and Director of Social Statistics and Director of Research at Statistics Finland. His research interests include survey statistics, the analysis of complex survey data, calibration methods, and small area estimation. He has given international courses on survey sampling, survey analysis and small area estimation. Dr. Lehtonen has been involved in European Commission Framework Programme research projects. He has published textbooks and journal articles on statistics. He serves as Associate Editor for international journals. He is involved in administrative bodies of international scientific and professional organizations in statistics. His service in organizing committees and scientific committees of international conferences include the World Statistics Conferences of the International Statistical Institute, New Techniques and Technologies for Statistics (NTTS) Conferences, Quality in Official Statistics conferences, Small Area Estimation conferences and Baltic-Nordic Conferences on Survey Statistics. Dr. Lehtonen is elected member of the International Statistical Institute.

Professional website: <https://wiki.helsinki.fi/display/SocStats/Lehtonen%2C+Risto>